English Acquisition RJ - Individual

Program Code: YEACIDRJ

This program is designed to promote students' acquisition of the English language; support their oral, visual, and written language development; as well as the development of their cognitive and communicative capacity. It provides the opportunity for students to learn the English language (understanding and using English to communicate), to learn about the English language (understanding how English works), and to learn through the English language (using English as a vehicle to convey meaning, thinking, learning, and reflecting). Students will develop skills and understanding that will enable them to identify, interpret, and respond to a range of print and visual texts. Through reading, individually and with others, they will develop a recognition that reading is a vehicle for learning, communicating, and an activity that can bring enjoyment. Through writing and creating their own visual texts, they will develop an understanding that writing is a means of recording, remembering, and communicating.

Mathematics RJ - Individual

Program Code: YMATIDRJ

This program is designed to develop students' understanding of mathematical concepts in contexts that are relevant and realistic to them so that they can apply their knowledge and understanding to real-world situations. They will develop an understanding of how the collection and organization of information helps to make sense of the world. They will develop an understanding of how measurement involves the comparison of objects and the ordering and sequencing of events. They will understand that shapes have characteristics that can be described and compared. Through identifying, describing, extending and creating patterns in various ways, they will understand that patterns and sequences occur in everyday situations. They will understand that numbers are used for many different purposes in the real world and be able to count and use number words and numerals to represent quantities.

English Acquisition 1 - Individual

Program Code: YEACID01

This program is designed to promote students' acquisition of the English language; support their oral, visual, and written language development; as well as the development of their cognitive and communicative capacity. It provides the opportunity for students to learn the English language (understanding and using English to communicate), to learn about the English language (understanding how English works), and to learn through the English language (using English as a vehicle to convey meaning, thinking, learning, and reflecting). Students will develop skills and understanding that will enable them to identify, interpret, and respond to a range of print and visual texts. Through reading, individually and with others, they will develop a recognition that reading is a vehicle for learning, communicating, and an activity that can bring enjoyment. Through writing and creating their own visual texts, they will develop an understanding that writing is a means of recording, remembering, and communicating.

Mathematics 1 - Individual

Program Code: YMATID01

This program is designed to develop students' understanding of mathematical concepts in contexts that are relevant and realistic to them so that they can apply their knowledge and understanding to real-world situations. They will develop an understanding of how the collection and organization of information helps to make sense of the world. They will develop an understanding of how measurement involves the comparison of objects and the ordering and sequencing of events. They will understand that shapes have characteristics that can be described and compared. Through identifying, describing, extending and creating patterns in various ways, they will understand that patterns and sequences occur in everyday situations. They will understand that numbers are used for many different purposes in the real world and be able to count and use number words and numerals to represent quantities.

Mathematics 3 - Small Group

Program Code: YMATSG03

This program is designed to develop students' understanding of mathematical concepts in contexts that are relevant and realistic to them so that they can apply their knowledge and understanding to real-world situations. They will develop an understanding of how the collection and organization of information helps to make sense of the world. They will develop an understanding of how measurement involves the comparison of objects and the ordering and sequencing of events. They will understand that shapes have characteristics that can be described and compared. Through identifying, describing, extending and creating patterns in various ways, they will understand that patterns and sequences occur in everyday situations. They will understand that numbers are used for many different purposes in the real world and be able to count and use number words and numerals to represent quantities.

Credit / Semester: 2.5

Duration: 12 Months

This program is designed to develop students' appreciation and awareness of the world as it is viewed from a scientific perspective. Scientific inquiry encourages the development of critical and creative thinking. Among others, students will develop their observational skills and build their understanding of basic cause and effect relationships. They will be encouraged to reflect on their learning process in order to make informed choices and a sense of responsibility regarding the impact of their actions on themselves, others and their world.

Program Code: YSOSID01

This program is designed to develop students' understanding and attitude towards the world around them. They will broaden their understanding of their world, starting on themselves, their friends and families, and their environment. They will explore different roles and responsibilities that they and other individuals have in different groups and environments. They will develop the necessary skills that will allow them to inquire critically and sensitively into the historical, geographical, social, economic, cultural, and technological factors that affect individuals, groups, and societies and their environments. The study of Social Studies helps students to critically appreciate the diversity of human culture, attitudes, and beliefs.

Social Studies 5 - Individual

Program Code: YSOSID05

This program is designed to develop students' understanding and attitude towards the world around them. They will broaden their understanding of their world, starting on themselves, their friends and families, and their environment. They will explore different roles and responsibilities that they and other individuals have in different groups and environments. They will develop the necessary skills that will allow them to inquire critically and sensitively into the historical, geographical, social, economic, cultural, and technological factors that affect individuals, groups, and societies and their environments. The study of Social Studies helps students to critically appreciate the diversity of human culture, attitudes, and beliefs.
